

Seeking participants for an online research study!

Researchers at St. Michael's Hospital in Toronto, Canada are studying the interaction between concussion & depression. They aim to better understand how these two conditions (both separately & combined) affect people's experience of reward, as well as their resilience (particularly during COVID-19).

We're looking for 4 groups of participants:

Depression

People with current depression and no history of concussion

1 3 2

Concussion

People with a concussion in the past 3-24 months and no psychiatric history

Depression & Concussion

People with current depression and a concussion within the past 3-24 months

4 Comparison group

People with no concussion or psychiatric history

Single session lasting approximately 90 minutes

Participation includes self-report questionnaires and computerized reward/cognitive tasks

Desktop or laptop computer required

Compensation provided for participating

For more information about the study, please visit www.canbind.ca/R3CODE or contact the study coordinator, Amanda Ceniti (amanda.ceniti@unityhealth.to)